Introduction

The collection of the Child Life Council consists of various materials covering the years 1955 to 2003. Early photographs of C.S. Mott Children’s Hospital taken in the 1920’s, as well as a 1937 report on Child Life (attributed to be one of the earliest statements of the Child Life profession) do exist as isolated parts of the collection casting a very early light on the blossoming profession. The collection consists of mostly printed material in the form of articles, publications, conference materials, and professional journals. There are also scrapbooks, photographs, videotapes, a few audiotapes, and ephemera (in the form of puppets). Much of the material was produced as a result of the efforts of the Child Life Council’s History Committee, and proves useful in gaining a perspective on the historical development and growth of the Child Life profession, from its earliest inception as a “play program” to the independent and fully recognized profession that it is today.

The Child Life Council collection was transferred to the Utica College Frank E. Gannett Library on {date}. According to Special Collection policy, those wishing to use the collection should contact the library director at least one week in advance of the date materials are needed.

This register was prepared in April 2004 by Nicole Chase-Iverson, Library and Information Studies graduate student intern, Syracuse University, New York.

Agency History

The Child Life Council was established as an independent organization in 1982, at which point there were 235 members. Though a new organization, the Child Life profession had been continually developing since the early 1920’s when research indicated that children’s health care experiences could be improved by providing play, preparation, and educational programs that could significantly lessen the pain and fear commonly associated with hospital treatment. Having been a Study Section within the Association for the Care of Children’s Health, the Child Life Council became an independent organization with its own professional offices and conferences in 1982. By 1986, the Child Life Council had adopted a standard of practice for professional certification, and by 1998 a standardized Child Life Professional Certification Examination had been established. By 2001, membership within the Child Life Council had reached over 2000, with approximately 400 Child Life programs in existence within the United States and abroad.
Scope and Content

The strength of this collection lies primarily in its usefulness as a tool to gauge the historical development of the Child Life profession. The Child Life Council History Committee was very active in its initiative to gather historical information from a variety of children’s hospital programs in order to develop an overall historical prospective on the profession. They were also very active in their efforts to provide biographical sketches of many of the pioneering professionals within the field, such as Emma Plank and Mary Brooks. Of special interest within this area, are the videotaped interviews with many Child Life advocates and professionals, as well as the printed notes that go along with each. A subject listing of these videotapes and the notes that go along with each is included within this finding aid.

Professional articles relating to the field of therapeutic “play” and Child Life initiatives (many written by the pioneering professionals that are also documented within the collection) are interspersed throughout the collection, and serve to document the growth of the field and its acceptance within the medical society.

The abundance of conference materials, professional journals, and publications serve to provide an outline of the issues and topics that Child Life, as a growing profession, felt were of utmost importance. Numerous articles within the collection cover theoretical issues, while many provide accounts of practical applications of professional practices.

Scrapbooks provide a visual insight into a few of the Child Life Council’s conferences by documenting some of the proceedings and attendees.

Of special photographic interest within the collection are a series of photographs of C.S. Mott Children’s Center “play” room taken in the early 1920’s. These large black and white photographs depict hospitalized children and their “nurses” within different areas of the children’s area.
