Welcome to another update with the CCLS Connection,

For those of you who are already certified, and plan to continue with recertification, the future is probably feeling pretty comfortable. But still, maybe not entirely clear! And if you are newer to ACLP, and in the middle of the education, training and certification process, there are long awaited changes to requirements only just around the corner. You need to be aware of how you fit into these new eligibility requirements. But understanding the future of certification might be less confusing for those of you are entirely new to the wonderful world of child life, just embarking upon your journey. We hope that with the information herein, all of you will feel better informed and know where your certification resources can be found.

Please explore all the resources we have available, and don't forget that if you have a faculty advisor, you have someone dedicated to walking you through. We look forward to our new generation of child life specialists. You are the first of a new cohort who will have been educated specifically to perform this work and to meet the higher standards that are effective January 1, 2019.

Resources for Establishing Eligibility for the Certification Exam

As many are aware, the 2019 eligibility requirements will be implemented in January. These requirements are intended to increase foundational knowledge for child life students, resulting in better-prepared, entry-level professionals. Individuals seeking the CCLS credential as a critical step to a career in the child life profession should use these requirements as a guide for their education and internship decisions.

ACLP has developed documents and webinars that applicants can use as resources to navigate the process of establishing eligibility for the certification exam. You will find below definitions of terms that may be unfamiliar as well as helpful information about some of the resources available to you. In addition, professors, academic advisors, fellow students, the ACLP Student Forum, ACLP staff, and internship supervisor/ rotation supervisors may also be leveraged to facilitate the process.

There are over 6,000 Certified Child Life Specialists, all of whom have gone through the process to become certified. You can do it, too!

Definition of Terms

Eligibility Assessment: Evaluates progress toward meeting certification requirements by incorporating: course work/degree review, clinical experience verification, and exam application. All exam candidates must successfully complete the Eligibility Assessment prior to being seated for the Child Life Professional Certification Examination.

Undergraduate/Graduate Endorsement: A voluntary review process for undergraduate and graduate academic programs. This review is done at the institution level; not all colleges/universities have endorsed programs. Students who complete an endorsed academic program are assured that the coursework they have taken will meet certification eligibility requirements.

Course pre-approval: Academic institutions may undergo a voluntary review of their courses for pre-approval in relation to the eligibility requirements. The pre-approval process evaluates course descriptions, syllabi and other materials to determine if a specific course fulfills one or more of the 2019 course requirements. If a course is pre-approved, students are assured that it will meet a specific requirement.

Certification Program Highlights

Job Analysis Update

The 2018 Job Analysis is now complete. There is a new Exam Content Outline (blueprint) that will be the basis for all exams beginning in March 2019 and beyond. It was determined that the eligibility requirements that go into effect on January 1, 2019 are appropriate for this new blueprint. There are no planned changes to the eligibility requirements in the foreseeable future. CLCC will continue to monitor exam data to determine if knowledge gaps exist that could be addressed through modifications to the eligibility requirements.

The JA also revealed the existence of an additional, advance level of practice different from the entry-level that the current certification exam assesses. In 2019, CLCC will explore the possibility of developing a recognition program for advanced level practitioners. More information will follow.
